THE HISTORY OF U-HIGH

The Laboratory School, of which the University High School is a part, came into being in 1903, a combination of the Chicago Manual Training School, the South Side Academy, and the University's already existing Laboratory School (elementary level only). In order to have the school in close proximity to the University campus, it was built on three acres of the J. Young Scammon homestead on the Midway Plaisance - Blaine Hall in 1903 and Belfield in 1904. The School of Education included a complete school system - a kindergarten, an elementary school, a high school, a college, and a graduate department. The kindergarten, elementary school, and high school were used as laboratory schools by the college and the graduate department. This original system has been changed and revised through the years by the various University administrators, but the original buildings still remain.

MR. SWAN and MISS HELMKAMP

We, the graduating class of 1957, dedicate our yearbook to our two advisors, Miss Helmkamp and Mr. Swan, who have helped us in countless ways during our last years of high school. In addition to being our advisors they are also our teachers and have worked with us constantly both in and out of the classroom. We shall never forget their unfailing interest in us and their wise guidance, and this dedication stands as an all too inadequate sign of our deep gratitude.

With Dick Penn and Mike Abbell returning from last year's team, which came in second in the league and won the P.S.L. Tennis Tournament, U-High's prospects for winning the league title this year are very good. The team will be further helped by a fine group of younger boys as well as a few returning lettermen.
